Honorable Judge Kollar-Kotelly,

I do not agree with the Proposed Final Judgment (PFJ). As I am a big advocate of technology and its advancement, I feel that Microsoft does nothing but hinder its process. As it has been obviously concluded numerous times over, Microsoft has made it very difficult for software companies to compete on the same level with its anti-competitives tactics. For ANY software company to compete with the Windows operating system or Office suite applications it would take tremendous dollars (billions most likely) to reach a user base of Microsofts level. As I write this email to you, I am using Microsoft Windows, Microsoft Outlook Express, I read an article on the Internet through Microsoft Internet Explorer, and later tonight I will write a paper in Microsoft Word. I can choose not to use these software products, but when I wish to work with the rest of the world out there electronically, I am left at the moment with only one choice of Microsoft. It is very unfortunate.

Sincerely,
Amish Shah
